

Sacred Dimensions of the Pathwork

3-Day Engagement

Leaving the World of Illusion
Remembering Our True Being

Thursday 6/6 – Sunday 6/9, 2019

Led by Erena Bramos, Donovan Thesenga

“To men, some things are good and some are bad.
But to God, all things are good and beautiful and just.” Heraclitus, c. 550 B.C.

The teachings of the Pathwork invite us to welcome deep intimacy with what truly IS. We come in touch with what truly is when the thinking mind is not engaged in its usual efforts to separate, understand, catalogue, change, and manipulate.

It is only then “that we can know that the world of material manifestation is a temporary one,” “which we should not ever assume to be our only and ultimate existence.” (#244)

We are encouraged to let go of seeking comfort in identifying with a sense of being a separate self. Then, in living the authentic truth of each moment, we can remember and inhabit our true nature; thus being an authentic part of the Mystery that is constantly unfolding.

This workshop will feature deep sharing of guidance, constant attention to the workings of the mind, and meditative silence. We will be invited to recognize the illusion of believing we are only a small part of the totality of what is. And we will help each other experience the exquisite peacefulness in abiding as Awareness.

In preparation, please read the following Pathwork lectures: 244, 253, 256
