A Blessing for a Gray Day

This quote from Pathwork Lecture 65 Question and Answers, offers solace for a gray day. May you be blessed by it.

35	May these words take root in your souls. May each one of you find something in the words I am privileged to give you from which to build deeper understanding, the inner will and inner peace to find yourselves without impatience, without inner haste. May these words help you to search in the knowledge and the awareness that whenever the world seems dismal and gray it is an indication that you are not in truth. If you can but retain this thought, it will help you in difficult times. Know that the shadow is not truth. Unhappiness, hopelessness is not truth. For the world is a beautiful one in which there is nothing to worry about. Whether you succeed in your work a little faster or slower makes no difference. For all of you, each soul ever created, will come to the light that is eternal happiness. It is bound to be that way! Take along this thought. May it strengthen you. Be blessed, my dear ones, each one of you, in God and in Christ. Be in peace, be in the Lord!
